As the heart of every OOPSLA Conference, the Exhibits provide an informal venue for interaction between Conference attendees and the software developers, publishers, technology researchers, framework architects, personal electronic device suppliers, training consultants and recruiters who offer the latest technology and information to the object-oriented community.

Like a bustling village square, the Exhibits are a place for 2500 object-oriented citizens to consult with exhibiting companies, meet personally with OOPSLA speakers one-on-one, consider the latest Poster presentations, browse at special activity locations like CodeFest or Camp Smalltalk, and still find time for lunch or refreshments.

The OOPSLA 2001 Exhibits will be held at the Tampa Convention Center in conjunction with other primary Conference activities.

OOPSLA 2001 exhibitors enjoy expanded visibility and increased attendance with these Exhibit Hall extras:

- Double-sized (10x20) booth spaces at discount rental rates with ample area for product display and visitors. Larger spaces are also available at discount rates.
- Booth rental now includes a Bartizan lead retrieval system, for enhanced ROI and increased sales!
- A complimentary Conference registration for each 100 sq. ft. of booth space rented. Conference registrations allow exhibitors to interact with other attendees at selected technical sessions and social functions. Each Conference registration is valued at $300-500!
- The “OOPSLA Courtyard” on the Exhibits floor will provide food & beverage concessions; message boards; the OOPSLA CodeFest; Camp Smalltalk; and an informal area for one-on-one interaction with featured conference speakers and authors.
- Conference refreshment breaks will take place in the Exhibits.
- The popular Publishers’ Pavilion, where attendees can browse for the latest periodicals and books.
- New this year! Geek Alley, where the latest technology in personal computing devices and peripherals can be purchased directly from the exhibiting company.
- OOPSLA Conference Posters will again be integrated with exhibit booths.
- OOPSLA 2001 exhibitors can place a link on the OOPSLA web site to their company page to let the object technology community know where to find you in Tampa.
- The Exhibitors’ Reception, open to all Conference participants, will take place on the Exhibits floor.
